

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

BEING HERE TODAY.

It was with considerable disgust that MARK ABLETT, bachelor proprietor of The Red House, had informed his house-party guests that his ne'er-do-well brother, ROBERT, who had been absent for fifteen years in Australia, was to visit him that afternoon. MATT CAYLEY, awaited the arrival of Robert after lunch, the guests playing golf. Robert arrived, was ushered into Mark's office by the maid, AUDREY STEVENS, who went to inform her master. Before she found Mark a shot was heard and

ANTHONY GILLINGHAM, a friend of BILLY BEVERLEY, one of Mark's guests, entered the house to find Cayley pounding on the locked door and demanding admittance. The men decided to force the office through a window and discovered a body on the floor with a shot in the head. Mark was not to be found and the dead man, Cayley told Anthony, was the brother who had just arrived.

CHAPTER IV

Guests at The Red House were allowed to do what they liked within reason—the reasonableness or otherwise of it being decided by Mark. The suggestion of (or by) Mark had made up their minds as to what they wanted to do, the plan had to be kept. Mrs. Calladine, who knew this little weakness of their host, suggested, therefore, the suggestion of Bill that they should have a second round of golf in the afternoon, and drive home comfortable after tea.

Anthony was standing in front of the house, waiting for them. He waved and they came back. Then the car drew up, Bill, who was in front with the chauffeur, jumped down and greeted him eagerly. "Hello, you madman have you come to stay, or what?" He had a sudden idea. "Don't say you're Mark Ablett's long-lost brother from Australia, though I could quite believe it of you. He laughed boisterously.

"Hello Bill," said Anthony quietly. "Will you introduce me? I'm afraid I've got some bad news. Bill, rather sobered up by this, introduced him. The Major and Mrs. Calladine were on the rear side of the car, and Anthony spoke to them in a low voice.

"I'm afraid I'm going to give you rather a shock," he said. "Robert Ablett, Mr. Mark Ablett's brother has been killed. He jerked a thumb over his shoulder. "In the house." "Do you mean that he has just killed himself?" asked Mrs. Calladine.

"It was about two hours ago. I happened to come home. A bolt turned to Beverly and explained—"I was coming to see you, Bill, and I arrived just after he—the death. Mr. Cayley and I found the body. Mr. Cayley being busy just now there are police and doctors and so on in the house. I asked me to tell you. He says that no doubt you would prefer the house-party having been broken up in this tragic way to leave as soon as possible." He gave a pleasant apologetic little smile.

"Bill gazed with open mouth at Anthony. Mrs. Calladine was quietly mistress of herself.

"We shall be in the way, yes, I quite understand," she said; "but we can't just shake the dust of the place off our shoes because something terrible has happened there. I must see Mark. He must know the facts sorted out a bit."

"Perhaps we—" she hesitated.

"The Major and I might be useful anyway," said Bill.

"Where is Mark?" said the Major suddenly, looking hard at Anthony.

Anthony looked back unwaveringly and said nothing.

"I think," said the Major gently leaning over to Mrs. Calladine, "that it would be better if you took Betty back to London tonight."

"Very well," she agreed quietly. As Anthony re-entered the hall, the Inspector from Middleston was just crossing into the library with Cayley. The latter stopped and nodded to Anthony.

"Wait a moment, Inspector. Here's Mr. Gillingham." And then to Anthony, "This is Inspector Birch."

It was in the first place—if anybody's.

The Inspector nodded. "This letter that Mark got—did you see it?"

"Not at the time. He showed it to me afterward."

"Any address?"

"No. A half-sheet of rather dirty paper."

"Where is it now?"

"I don't know. In Mark's pocket, I expect."

"Ah!" He pulled at his beard. "Can you remember what it said?"

"As far as I remember, something like this: 'Mark, your loving brother, all the way from Australia. Give you warning so that you will be able to conceal your surprise, but not, I hope, your pleasure. Expect him at three, or thereabouts.'"

"Ah!" The Inspector copied it down carefully. "Did you notice the postmark?"

"London."

"And what was Mark's attitude?"

"Annoyance, disgust—" Cayley hesitated.

"Apprehension?"

"No, not exactly. Or, rather, apprehension of an unpleasant interview, not or any unpleasant outcome, for himself."

"You mean that he wasn't afraid of violence, or blackmail, or anything of that sort?"

"He didn't appear to be."

"Right—" Now then, he arrived, you say, about three o'clock?"

"Yes, about that."

"Who was in the house then?"

"Mark and myself, and some of the servants. I don't know which. Of course, you will ask them directly, no doubt."

"With your permission. No guests?"

"They were out all day playing golf."

"Where were you when Robert arrived?" asked Birch.

Cayley explained how he had been sitting in the hall, now Audrey had asked him where the master was, and how he had said that he had last seen him going up to the Temple.

"I'm afraid I've got some bad news."

"She went away, and I went on with my book. There was a step on the stairs, and I looked up to see Mark coming down. He went into the office, and I went on with my book again. I went into the library for a moment, to refer to another book, and when I was in there I heard a shot. At least, it was a loud bang, I wasn't sure if it was a shot. I stood and listened."

"Then I came slowly to the door and looked out. Then I went back again, hesitated a bit, you know, and finally decided to go across to the office, and make sure that it was all right. I turned the handle of the door and found it was locked. Then I got frightened, and I banged at the door, and shouted, and—well, that was when Mr. Gillingham arrived. He went on to explain how they had found the body."

The Inspector looked at him with a smile.

"Yes, well, we shall have to go over some of that again, Mr. Cayley. Mr. Mark, now. Did he say anything?"

"He said, 'Robert's here' or something of the sort. I said 'Yes' and he gave a sort of shrug, and said, 'Don't go too far away, I might want you', and then went in."

"What did you think he meant by that?"

"Well, he consults me a good deal, you know. I'm his sort of official solicitor in a kind of way."

"Yes. How long was it before you heard the shot?"

"Two minutes, perhaps."

The Inspector finished his writing, and then regarded Cayley thoughtfully. Suddenly he said:

"What is your theory of Robert's death?"

Cayley shrugged his shoulders.

"You've probably seen more than I've seen," he answered. "I can only speak as a layman—and Mark's friend."

"Well, I should say that Robert came here meaning trouble, and bringing a revolver with him. He produced it almost at once, Mark tried to get it from him, there was a struggle, perhaps, and it went off. Mark lost his head, finding himself with a revolver in his hand and a dead man at his feet. His one idea was to escape. He locked the door almost instinctively, and then, when he heard me hammering at it, went out of the window."

"Yes, yes. Well, that sounds reasonable enough. What do you say, Mr. Gillingham?"

"I should hardly call it reasonable to lose your head," said Anthony, getting up from his chair and coming toward them.

"Well, you know what I mean. It explains things."

"Oh, yes. Any other explanation would make them much more complicated."

"Have you any other explanation?"

"Not!"

"Well, now, about yourself. You're not staying in the house, I gather?"

Anthony explained his previous movements.

"Yes. Just as I came in sight of the house. It didn't make any impression at the time, but I remember it now."

"Where were you then?"

"Coming up the drive."

"Nobody left the house by the front door after the shot?"

"Nobody," said "No."

"Thank you. You're at 'The George', if I want you?"

"Mr. Gillingham is staying here until after the inquest," explained Cayley.

TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

To each and all of the above-named defendants respectively and to all other persons conspiring, agreeing or confederating with them.

This cause coming before this court on this August 1st, 1922, upon the Bill of Complaint and affidavits filed therewith as part thereof on motion of plaintiff for a temporary restraining order, and it appearing from the allegation of said Bill of Complaint and said affidavits that defendants are forcibly hindering, hampering, and interfering with the movement of plaintiff's engines, cars and trains in interstate commerce, some of which trains and cars carry the United States mails, and are trespassing upon the tracks, right-of-way and property of plaintiff, and that defendants are forcibly hindering, hampering and interfering with the maintenance and repair of plaintiff's locomotives and cars which are instrumentalities of interstate commerce; and it further appearing from said Bill of Complaint and affidavits that defendants are so numerous that it would be impossible to secure service of notice of plaintiff's application to this court for a temporary restraining order, to stop defendants' interference with the trains, locomotives and cars of plaintiff moving in interstate commerce, some of which carry the United States mails, and with the maintenance and repair of said engines and cars; and the Court being of opinion that such an order being of opinion that the acts of defendants, acting, combining and conspiring with them should be stopped and order restored; and it further appearing to the Court from said Bill of Complaint and affidavits that the injury threatened will cause great loss and destruction to plaintiff's property, wrongful and unlawful interruption and interference with the conduct of plaintiff's business as common carrier of interstate commerce and as carrier of the United States mails; and it appearing to the Court that immediate and irreparable injury will result to plaintiff before notice of plaintiff's motion for such temporary restraining order can be served, and all of them attorneys, servants, agents and associates, members and employees and all other persons acting in aid of or in conjunction with them or any of them and all said defendants and their representatives and all their respective associations and organizations and the associations, unions and organizations which they represent and the members thereof be, and they are hereby restrained, enjoined from in any manner hindering, obstructing, interfering with, or attempting to prevent by intimidation threats or violence any person or persons from freely entering into or continuing in plaintiff's service in its business as a common carrier from in any manner agreeing, combining and, or conspiring to obstruct or interfere with the property or the business of plaintiff, from compelling or inducing or attempting to compel or induce by use of threats, intimidation, violence, fraudulent or deceptive assertions, any person now in the employ of plaintiff to cease to perform his duties or to fail or refuse to enter or continue in plaintiff's service, from directing or persuading any other person or persons under the control of said defendants to interfere with or prevent by threats, intimidations, fraud or violence any persons from entering or continuing in the employ of plaintiff in its said business; from in any manner hindering or obstructing plaintiff's employees in going to or from their work in plaintiff's said business; from trespassing or entering upon the grounds or premises of plaintiff for the purpose of interfering with or hindering or obstructing its said business or for the purpose of compelling or inducing by threats, intimidations, violence or abusive language any of plaintiff's employees to cease to perform their duties as such and from compelling or inducing or attempting to induce by threats or intimidations or abusive language any of plaintiff's employees to leave its service or to fail or refuse to perform their duties as such employees or compelling or attempting to compel by like means any person desiring to secure employment with plaintiff from accepting such employment; from directing, aiding, counseling, assisting or abetting any other person or persons, company, association or organization to do or cause to do or cause to be done any of the things aforesaid; from engaging in wrongful and unlawful picketing or causing to be assembled numbers, groups, gangs or crowds of persons who are strikers or in sympathy with said strike in proximity to the property of plaintiff, such as the shops, round houses, terminals, station buildings and station grounds, platforms or approaches thereof of plaintiff's railroad
